

Note: This position is not with the City of Chelsea, but with one of the City's partners, Chelsea Green Space, on a project that is very important to the city.

Community Research Assistant / Junior Organizer

Job Description: Boston University's and Harvard's Schools of Public Health are working together with the Chelsea Green Space on a project about air quality, housing, and health. We are looking for a Chelsea resident involved with the community who is interested in working with our research team as a Community Research Assistant. The position will include working with study team members to recruit residents across Chelsea for participation in the study, assistance in communicating details about the research project, and helping collect data in people's homes. The Community Research Assistant will be trained to ask participants questions from a standardized questionnaire about their home environment, daily activities, and other related information. They will also enter online questionnaire data using an iPad.

Requirements: An applicant must be fluent in English & Spanish, have basic computer skills, and be comfortable speaking with local residents and being in their homes. Organizing and door-knocking experience preferred.

Hours: Up to 20 hours per week

Time Frame: Temporary employment from June 2016 throughout the summer, with potential opportunities for regular employment in the Fall.

Compensation: $15 per hour
